THE NATION

As the strike by the United Automobile Workers union against the Ford Motor Company went through its second day, there were indications that the strike could lead to a shortage of new cars and a resulting price increase. Ford makes about 25 per cent of United States auto output, and thus far the other manufacturers have not stepped up their production to take advantage of Ford's shutdown. Many automobile officials expect that General Motors might be shut down as soon as the Ford strike is over, thus continuing the shortage of new cars.

In another labor dispute, a judge ordered Youngstown's policemen and firemen to return to work or he would issue an injunction against the walkout, which has kept 90 per cent of the fire and police departments off the job since Wednesday.

Michigan's Governor Romney had his political problems. The Detroit News, a paper that had supported Romney during all his political career, prepared a Sunday editorial urging him to get out of the Republican presidential race in favor of Governor Rockefeller of New York. A copy of the editorial was circulated in Washington, where Romney was attending a meeting with his supporters.

THE WORLD

In his first news conference in six weeks, Secretary of State Rusk said he could not offer any "gold-plated guarantees" that Communist China would not interfere in the Vietnam war in retaliation against stepped-up American air attacks.

SPORTS

Mistakes hurt both Warren County high school football teams who opened the 1967 season last night. Youngsville's undefeated string was snapped as General McLane blanked the Eagles, 20-0 and Sheffield fell before Otto-Eldred, 13-6. Page A8.

Warren Area High School's cross country team, defending PIAA Class A champions, lost its opening meet of the season to North East yesterday, 19-36. Gary Murray of the Grape-pickers finished first in a time of 13:01, breaking Dave Cobb's existing mark. Cobb came in second with a 13:15 clocking. Page A8.

Corry plays host to the Dragon football team tonight in the 37th game of an ancient rivalry. The Beavers will be pointing for an upset behind the running and passing of junior quarterback Denny Harrison and the Blue and White will counter with the running of halfback Dan O'Neil and fullback Steve Tundel. Page A9.

The Detroit Tigers, who haven't won a pennant in 22 years, surged into a tie for the American League lead with Minnesota last night by whipping the Chicago White Sox, 4-1. The Twins split a twinbill with Baltimore. In the senior circuit, Pittsburgh continued its domination over the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals by winning 4-1. Page A8.

BECAUSE OF STRIKE AT FORD

Auto Scarcity, High Cost Seen

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
DETROIT — A shortage of new cars and higher car prices were expected yesterday as the strike at the Ford Motor Company went into its second day.
Striking members of the United Auto Workers lined up at Ford plants across the country to pick up their pay checks for last week's work. And with no quick settlement expected, car buyers will be lining up across the country in coming months.

Says Jet Business Is Sold to Israel

By LEONARD SLOANE
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — Rockwell-Standard Corporation, a major diversified industrial corporation, is believed to have sold its executive jet aircraft business to the government of Israel for $25 million.

Col. Willard F. Rockwell Sr., founder and chairman of the company, told the Oklahoma City Oklahoman yesterday: "Everything about the sale is final, except we haven't signed the contract. But the contract is agreeable to everyone."

However, company officials at the Pittsburgh headquarters were surprised by reports of the Colonel's statement.

"No agreement has been reached with any party, including Israel," said Donald MacLeod, vice president and general counsel.

"Obviously the Israel government has been one of the negotiating parties," said Dupuy Bateman, another vice president. "Whether they or any of the others have reached an agreement, we here in Pittsburgh office do not know."

Court Bans Sales Of Cut-Rate Milk

By WILLIAM A. DEIBLER
HARRISBURG (AP) — Commonwealth Court issued a temporary order yesterday banning a Pittsburgh store from selling cut-rate milk for use as pet food.

Judge William W. Lipsitt issued the order against the C & D Budget Dairy Store, Inc., after a day-long hearing on a complaint brought by the State Milk Control Commission.

The commission immediately filed a new petition asking that the temporary order be made permanent. No date was set for a hearing.

C & D, owned and operated by members of the United Dairy Farmers, had been selling milk since last Aug. 21 for 79 cents a gallon, 29 cents below the commission-set minimum price.

In asking for an injunction, the commission charged the cut-rate sales violated the state's 30-year-old Milk Control Law which empowers the agency to regulate wholesale and retail milk prices in Pennsylvania.

William D. Morgan of Scranton, commission attorney, said the store was opened "as a sham to circumvent the rules and regulations of the commission."

Morgan produced seven witnesses, most of them commission employees, who testified that they had bought milk at C & D for 79 cents a gallon.

"They sold milk for less than the price set by the commission," Morgan said, "therefore, they have violated the law."

Paul A. Simmons of Monongahela, an attorney for C & D, argued that the commission does not have the power to regulate retail prices for milk that is sold as animal food.

Commission price orders, he said, specify the price dealers must pay farmers for such milk but do not mention retail prices.

"No evidence has been presented that this store was established as a sham or subterfuge," Simmons said. "And there has been no evidence given that the milk sold there was ever intended for anything other than animal use."

Col. Rockwell could not be reached for comment last night. Natchum Shamir, economic minister for Israel in the United States and Canada, said he did not know anything about the transaction.

If the Jet Commander, Rockwell-Standard's business jet, is sold, it will apparently remove the last obstacle to the merger of the company with North American Aviation, Inc. Stockholders of both concerns approved the proposal last June.

The Justice Department had blocked the proposed merger — which would create one of the leading 20 industrial corporations in the U.S. with combined annual sales of $2.7 billion — because both companies produce executive jets.

The planes are different, however; and the Jet Commander sells for $595,000, while the North American Sabreliner sells for close to $1 million.

Col. Rockwell told the Oklahoman that Israel has "all of the equipment needed for making planes. We'll just have to teach them about the Jet Commander."

Romney Bid Hit By Detroit Paper

BY WARREN WEAVER JR.
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
WASHINGTON — The Detroit News, which has supported Gov. George Romney strongly during all his political career to date, will urge him to get out of the Republican presidential race in favor of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York.

In an editorial in its Sunday editions, the newspaper will say that it has abandoned hope that the Michigan governor will "finally organize and coordinate a purposeful campaign and articulate specific goals." A copy of the editorial was made available here today.

Politicians gathered here for a meeting of the Republican National Committee concluded that the editorial shift by the influential newspaper would further weaken Romney's undeclared campaign for his party's presidential nomination.

News of the editorial broke at the close of another day of controversy over Romney's remarks earlier this week that he had been "brainwashed" by diplomats and military leaders during a visit to Vietnam in 1965.

The Detroit News editorial declared that the brainwashing comment "illustrated to a nicety Governor Romney's unfortunate incapacity to achieve stability and constancy in presidential politics, his inability in answering substantive national questions with something other than nervous bombast."

Romney's statements supporting the administration in Vietnam made after his visit there in 1965, the paper said, could lead to a belief that "the governor is either incapable of maintaining a stand on so vital an issue or, less charitably, that he trims his Vietnam position to accommodate prevailing political whims."

When a reporter told Romney of the Detroit News editorial, he replied: "That's very amusing."

Romney flew into Washington from the west coast late yesterday afternoon to attend a reception his supporters were giving on his behalf for members of the National Committee at the Washington Hilton Hotel. He declined to answer any questions on his arrival, saying he would hold a news conference here this morning.

Even Leonard W. Hall, the chairman of the Romney for President committee, said that the brainwashing comment "is not a plus." He insisted, however, that it had not turned any members of the national committee against Romney.

"I think it finally comes down to an issue of credibility between Governor Romney and Secretary McNamara," Hall said as he arrived from the Romney reception.

"Given that choice, I have no doubt whom the American people will support."

Project Here Gets $50,000

BY WALT ERELAND

The U.S. Department of Labor has approved a grant of $50,340 towards the total cost of $72,440 for a Neighborhood Youth Corps project in Warren and Forest counties, Sen. Joseph Clark (D-Pa.) said yesterday.

The program is to provide for paid employment of 50 students in an "in school" project and 40 youngsters in a summer work program, according to Richard Brown, head of the Warren-Forest Counties Office of Economic Opportunity, the administering agency.

Brown said boys and girls 15 years old and up who are enrolled in a public or private school in Warren or Forest County and are from low-income families may qualify for jobs provided by any public non-profit organization.

They will be paid $1.25 per hour out of project funds for work as clerk-typists, librarian aides, custodial aides, grounds-keeper aides and tutorial aides.

Jobs will be provided by public schools, township officials, borough councils, public libraries, the U.S. Forest Service, Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters, Marine

Weekend Rally 'Gigantic'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Civil rights demonstrators from seven states were summoned to Milwaukee yesterday for what was termed a "gigantic" weekend rally supporting the NAACP's Milwaukee Youth Council campaign for a city open housing law.

There were no confirmed reports that the rally at 3 p.m. Sunday would precede a massive march into Milwaukee's virtually all-white South Side, where about 150,000 residents are of Polish extraction.

The initial NAACP sortie in the present campaign went into the area 12 days ago, and all of Milwaukee's available police were called out to protect the demonstrators.

As rumors of the project spread Friday, the 32nd Division of the Wisconsin National Guard announced that it was bringing its military police company plus other selected units to the Wisconsin State Fair grounds in suburban West Allis for "riot control exercises."

Some 4,800 Red Arrow division soldiers camped at the same site a month ago, when they were ordered out in a previous racial disturbance.

Daytime activities were light Friday. A "mother's march" announced Thursday night by Father James E. Groppi, the white Roman Catholic priest who leads the Youth Council, brought only 15 women—13 of them white—to City Hall.

REMOVE DEMONSTRATOR

About 100 open housing demonstrators staged a four hour sit-in Thursday in Milwaukee Mayor Henry Maier's office. Police are shown carrying ing one of the demonstrators from the office. At least four arrests were made.

Astrobugs' Trip To Help Spacemen

By HOWARD BENEDICT
CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Despite one bug too many, the strange passengers on America's "astrobug" satellite multiplied, grew and feasted yesterday.

The unwelcome "bug" was a communications problem that at times prevented ground stations from sending radio commands to the Biosatellite 2 spacecraft. Each time it happened, the stations were able to overcome the trouble by repeatedly transmitting the signal at different frequency levels until it was accepted.

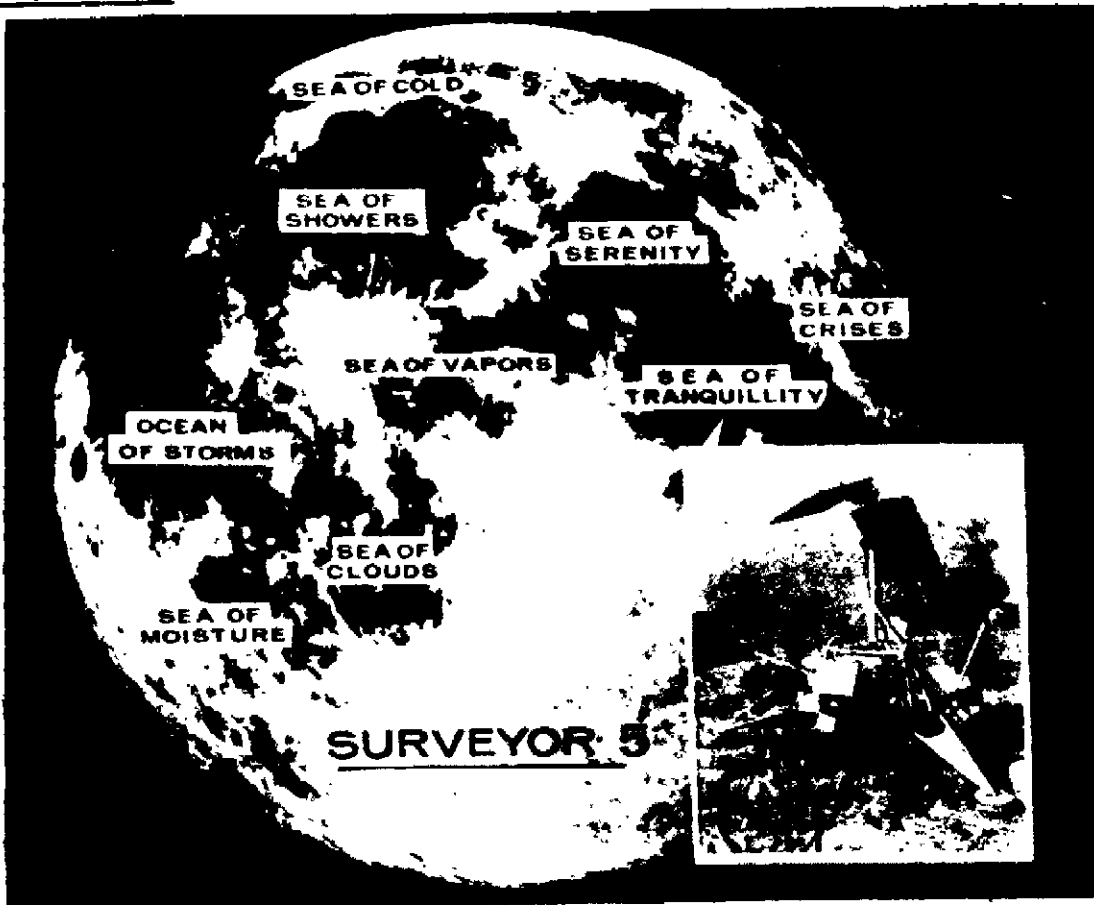

"It's a situation we're learning to live with," said a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "It should not affect the mission."

Biosatellite 2 and its cargo of more than 10 million insects, plants and bacteria soared into a 200-mile-high orbit Thursday aboard a Delta rocket. Purpose of the 13 experiments aboard is to determine how space weightlessness and radiation affect basic biological processes. The findings could forecast what biological hazards face future astronauts on lengthy space trips such as two-year roundtrips to Mars.

The spacecraft is to circle the earth for nearly three days. About 3 p.m. (EDT) Sunday, its retro-rocket is to fire to start it back to earth. An Air Force plane will attempt to snag the payload parachute as Biosatellite 2 descends over the Pacific Ocean near Hawaii.

The capsule will be rushed to a laboratory in Hawaii where biologists will begin the lengthy analyses of the experiments.

When the craft is opened, its passenger list may have swelled to more than 13 billion, primarily through the rapid reproduction rate of bacteria cells which may multiply through as many as 20 generations during the orbital trip.

SURVEYOR ON ITS WAY

Surveyor 5 (inset), a 2,216-pound robot, is speeding towards the moon, scheduled to land on the moon's Sea of Tranquility late Sunday.

VALVE FAILS TO CLOSE

Surveyor Veers Off Course

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Moon-aimed Surveyor 5 rocketed slightly off course last night after a remote steering maneuver and a scientist said "it's a situation we don't understand."

Spokesmen at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said a helium tank valve failed to close fully after the spacecraft's engines made a mid-course correction on signals from earth.

In attempting to close the valve, scientists fired Surveyor's three liquid-fuel engines again for 10 seconds. It slowed the leak, but didn't stop it.

A spokesman said the valve to the tank of helium must be closed because the helium is required to pressurize the liquid fuel.

The unscheduled firing of the engines thrust the spacecraft off course but scientists believe not enough to miss the moon.

BLUE EYES BELIEVE TOUGHNESS

Union Head is Shapely Blonde

By A. F. MAHAN

DETROIT (AP) — The twinkle in Mary Ellen Riordan's blue eyes and her easy smile belie the toughness with which she is conducting a strike of 11,000 Detroit public school teachers.

How long will her AFL-CIO Detroit Federation of Teachers forsake the classroom for the picket line?

"Just as long as necessary," is her firm reply.

She's shooting for both more pay and a shorter work year—$12,000 across the board and 38 instead of 40 weeks.

While teachers were to have gone back last Tuesday and didn't, Mrs. Riordan refuses to term their action anything other than—"just taking an extended summer recess."

That "recess," which is keeping 300,000 youngsters home beyond their normal summer break has made blonde Mary Ellen Riordan's name almost as well known here as that of Detroit's most famous rethead—Walter P. Reuther.

A day after Mrs. Riordan's teachers refused to report, Reuther's United Auto Workers walked out on strike against the Ford Motor Co. Now many Detroit mothers have not only the children home, but father too.

Picket placards proclaim "Keep Good Teachers in Detroit." That, says Mrs. Riordan, is what she's trying to do and thus improve the schools by keeping the cream of the teaching crop from going elsewhere.

Her 125 pounds well proportioned over a 5-foot-3 3/4 frame, Mrs. Riordan is a one-time science teacher and holds a master's degree. She joined the Detroit Federation of Teachers in the middle 1940s, after her husband, Daniel, was killed in the "Battle of the Bulge" in World War II.

Then the union was small and looked down upon by the teaching Old Guard as something unprofessional, not proper.

By 1960, she had become president of her still small union. In 1961 she took what has now become a permanent leave of absence as a teacher to build her union. Her pay is $10,000 a year—the same as a 12-year teacher with a master's degree—plus an expense ac-

Charge Pending

Reckless driving charges are pending against Margaret E. Dorsey, 61, 203 Pioneer st., following an accident in the borough yesterday afternoon. Police said Mrs. Dorsey was driving east on Pennsylvania ave. and crashed into a car parked at the south curb near East st., causing $775 damage. The operator of the second car was William E. Tannler, 108 Russell st. police said.

He said he felt the present policy was unfair to Jamestown taxpayers and requested a full report from the finance committee at next month's meeting.

Prior to yesterday's meeting George Fulton of the Buffalo engineering firm of Metcalf and Eddy addressed the board on the 50-year master plans for water and sewage facilities currently being formulated for the county. Fulton noted the studies will require 12 months for completion but that interim reports will be released to county officials periodically. Twelve mayors of county villages attended yesterday's meeting to hear the report on the water and sewage studies.

4H Cleanup

As a community service project 4-H Club members representing 23 Warren County clubs will report to the Youngsville Warren County Fair Grounds at Pittsfield, for a clean-up project.

After cleaning up the fair grounds, the young people will hold a corn and Weiner roast.

The 4-H groups are being commended for undertaking this project.

IN SETTING DISPUTE DEADLINE

Judge Quotes Cal Coolidge

BY MARTIN ARNOLD

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — A local judge, evoking the words of Calvin Coolidge, gave the city's firemen and policemen until 10 o'clock today to settle their wage dispute and return to work.

About 90 per cent of the city's fire and police personnel walked off the job late Wednesday night when their demand for a wage increase was not met. The men say they are not striking but are attending "job seminars."

Common Pleas Judge Sidney L. Rigelhaupt said yesterday afternoon after a hearing in his chambers that if the men are not back at work in the morning "I will enter an order of injunction, unless they can show some reason why I shouldn't."

He said also that he would order Mayor Anthony B. Flak to evince Ohio's never used Ferguson act, which prohibits strikes and work stoppages by public employees.

"To quote Cal Coolidge, there's no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, at any time," the short, silver-haired judge said after he donned his robes and came out of chambers to speak to reporters.

He reported further that he had admonished Flak, saying that the city had "an obligation to provide adequate pay for police officers and firemen to meet with them. It is the obligation of the executive branch, not the courts, to provide funds to operate the city."

Late yesterday afternoon the firemen and policemen, joined together in an organization called the Youngstown Safety Forces, and the city administration, started direct negotiations for the first time in the long smoldering dispute.

Youngstown, meanwhile, appeared to take the shortage of police and firemen calmly. It is a city that apparently is peculiarly unaffected by adversity.

Last year this city of 170,000 persons was beset by strikes by nurses and Sanitation and Water Department truckdrivers and also the first teacher strike in Ohio's history.

In July of this year, two buildings were dynamited and three others were burned in a short-lived outbreak of racial violence.

"We've had trouble before," said Fred Klein, a jewelry store owner. "The police and fire thing seems to have brought people closer, like the blackout in New York did," he said.

Actually, the police department has been able to put two 12-hour shifts of about 40 men each onto the streets in patrol cars. These men are mostly officers, lieutenants and up, or members of the police vice squad or juvenile bureau.

So far, crime has not increased since the so-called "seminars" started and the weary officers on the job have been keeping things under control, although certainly no traffic tickets are being given out.

Only one of the city's 12 fire houses is open and it is being manned by a small group of fire department officers and trainees. There have been no real fire emergencies, and no increase in the number of small blazes.

Part of the calm evident in this city is due to the fact that no one actually believes the firemen will not respond to a fire in a hospital or school or one that threatens a large area.

In Youngstown, starting salary for policemen and firemen is $5,700 a year. It jumps to $6,300 after three years and stops there. There are no graduated salary scales in either department. A police captain and the equivalent in the fire department earns $8,000 a year.

More Days to Register Given Jamestown Voters

MAYVILLE, N.Y. — Chautauque County voters will have four additional days to register for the November election as a result of action taken yesterday by the county board of supervisors. The supervisors approved a resolution by a vote of 30 to two authorizing the additional registration days in October beginning Tuesday Oct. 3.

Other registration days include Saturday, Oct. 7, Friday Oct. 12, and Saturday, Oct. 14. Voters will be registered on Tuesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and on Saturday from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

In a report to the supervisors, the county board of election indicated in excess of 50 per cent of the county's eligible voters have already registered under permanent personal registration. Supervisor Edward G. Mattison, chairman of the elections committee, told the board some 250 workers will be stationed at polling places throughout the county on the four days. In Jamestown all voters who have not registered may do so at their regular polling places.

In reducing the number of registration days from eight to four, Mattison said, a savings of $40,000 to county taxpayers will be realized. Several supervisors lauded the Republican and Democratic committees for their efforts in encouraging over 9,100 persons to register in Jamestown last week.

Lindsay Says He'll Seek an Injunction

By LEONARD BUDER

(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — Mayor John V. Lindsay said yesterday that the city would seek a court injunction to prevent a mass resignation of teachers on Monday, when the new school term begins.

He said such action by the city was mandated under a new state law prohibiting strikes by public employees. Describing the threatened resignations as a strike, the mayor said:

"If the schools are open and the teachers don't report and throw picket lines around the schools, I think any reasonable person would call it a strike."

He did not say when the city's corporation counsel would go to court for a restraining order against the teacher's union. But sources indicated this would probably come late Sunday, if all other efforts to head off the walkout fail.

But Albert Shanker, the president of the 49,000-member United Federation of Teachers, said later:

"And an injunction won't help. If there is a choice between a rotten settlement and going to jail, I'll go to jail."

He also announced that the union would hold a general membership meeting at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The 39-year-old mathematics teacher predicted that the members would back their leaders' call for rejection of the board of education's $125-million contract offer.

On Thursday night, 2,500 members of the union's delegate assembly voted to reject the proposal. There were only a few votes to accept the offer.

At that time Shanker said that the salary offer was "merely inadequate" but that the overall proposal would not do "a damn thing for the improvement of the schools."

In a statement addressed to the public and the system's 55,000 teachers, Alfred A. Giardino, president of the Board of Education, said yesterday that "our schools will be open Monday morning, hopefully manned by all of our regular teachers."

"But even if some do not attend," he said, "the children will be properly cared for by the devoted teaching staff supplemented by administrative and supervisory personnel as well as parents and other citizens."

Douse Fire At Clarendon

Firemen doused a fire at the Claude Bleach residence in Clarendon last night.

Gas leaking from a heater ignited and burned a portion of a sitting room floor, according to Leonard Falbriski, Clarendon fire chief.

Three pumper trucks, the emergency truck and 18 fire fighters answered the alarm.

Bradford TV

Bradford city council Wednesday adopted an ordinance providing terms of a new ten-year non-exclusive agreement with a group headed by Ridgway.

Pittsburgh-Altoona interests to furnish television cable service to the city. Council voted several weeks ago to terminate the franchise of Bradford Cable TV Co., ruling it had violated contract terms by increasing the monthly charge. The company is continuing, however, to provide service despite cancellation of its municipal permit.

"I don't draw any flat conclusions on that point," the secretary replied. "I think it would be most ill-advised for the authorities in Peiping to come into this war. We hope they will stay out of it."

"Our own objectives are limited. We have no designs on China. As a matter of fact, we don't even have designs on North Vietnam, if they would just stop trying to take over some neighbors by force."

"But I wouldn't be able to offer any gold-plated guarantees on this subject. There are elements of risk, and we have tried to move with the prudence that would minimize such risks."

the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Brown said the "in school" project would begin September 11 and run through June 7. Corpsmen would be eligible to work a maximum of 2 hours per school day, eight hours on non-school days. The maximum number of hours per week would be ten.

The summer program to run from June 10 to August 30 would employ teenagers who will be returning to school in the fall. A maximum work week of 32 hours will hold for summer workers.

Brown said the low income qualification is set by guidelines based on whether the applicant is from a farm or non-farm family and the number of members in the family.

Sen. Clark said counseling, testing and remedial education will be provided for corpsmen where necessary.

Teachers Seeking Bacon, Not Apple

By FRED M. HECHINGER
N.Y. Times Education Editor
(c) N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK—No Madison Avenue campaign has ever changed a client's image as radically as the nation's teachers have changed theirs. Kindly Mr. Chips and modest schoolmarm have been wiped off the public mind. Tough union leaders and equally tough spokesmen for the once softspoken national education association and its local affiliates leave no doubt that their mission is not to get a charitable apple for their teachers but to bring home the bacon of new pay scales and power over school policy.

This is the picture in New York where the United Federation of Teachers has rejected a $125-million money package and is threatening to prevent schools from opening on Monday. Crisis reports are in from across the country, including Michigan, Florida, Kentucky, Illinois and Maryland. Everywhere, teacher militancy runs high.

Dissatisfaction with salaries is still the most concrete grievance.

Average teachers' salaries now amount to $7,000, but only slightly more than 6 per cent of the nation's two million teachers are in the $10,000 and above category, and the "above" rarely exceeds $13,000. The only way to crash through the ceiling is to turn administrator, a change of life that often requires more political than educational ability.

The problem is how to satisfy professional salary demands within a civil service wage structure with automatic stepup for great numbers and with little or no differentiation between mediocre and successful accomplishments. Yet, good education should not be judged routinely, in civil service fashion, while it also defies productivity measurements of industry.

A less tangible problem is that everybody, including teachers, is unhappy about the state of public education, especially in the cities. In the urban combat between power blocs, the schools are the most visible public agency, expected to cure conditions of poverty, ignorance, strife and prejudice. They are embattled.

In this siege, the teachers are on the ramparts. Like all frontline troops, they are often blamed not only for their own failings but also for their inadequate training, the mistakes of headquarters generals and of the civilian bosses at the board of education, and the shortages of supplies. Increasingly, therefore, the teachers, not unlike Marines with faulty rifles, take their anger to the public, while re-belling against their superiors.

A basic problem seems that teachers, some ill-suited for their task but many more badly trained and badly led, are asked to do an impossible job—teach classes of 30 or more youngsters, many of them reluctant, when the job might be rendered possible with half the number of children. And teachers are expected to succeed by following routines often unsuited to the job, in systems that, as in New York, are so rigid and unprofessional that they require time-clock punching.

Many observers now ask whether the labor-management approach and the hardening of positions will not make the systems even more rigid, more clock-and-bell dominated.

Many experts are convinced that there is no fiscal or manpower way of doubling the number of teachers. They therefore believe that the only way to cut class size in half is through use of armies of para- and non-professional forces, as has been done in Project Head Start.

Prof Faces Loss of Home After Policies Cancelled

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The lawyer for a literary critic and professor awaiting trial on a narcotics charge said yesterday his client could lose his home because of the case.

Two insurance companies have canceled the homeowner policies of Dr. Leslie A. Fielder, attorney Herald P. Fahringer told a reporter.

A Buffalo bank that holds the mortgage to Fielder's home "is inclined to go along" now with the State University at Buffalo professor, but the loss of fire insurance might eventually force a foreclosure, the lawyer said.

In another development, the University of Amsterdam, Netherlands, said it had reinstated its invitation to Fielder to lecture there during the fall semester as a guest professor.

The university withdrew its invitation to Fielder last month, saying that because of the case, his presence "would generate discussion and adverse publicity."

Fahringer said he did not know whether Fielder, now vacationing in France, had learned of the reversal or what plans he now had. After the invitation was withdrawn, the lawyer said, Fielder made plans to begin teaching duties next Monday at the University of Sussex in Brighton, England, as a visiting professor in American studies.

Fielder, his wife, a son, daughter-in-law and two youths were arrested on various narcotics charges after a police raid last April 28 on the family's home.

RAKES THE EASTERN CARIBBEAN

Hurricane Beulah Turns Into a Killer Storm

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Beulah turned into a killer last night, flooding portions of Martinique Island in the Lesser Antilles and causing eight deaths according to reports from the area.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Miami said a teletype message from the area confirmed four of the Martinique deaths and indicated flooding was to blame.

The weather station report said the Martinique airport was under a foot of water.

Other unconfirmed reports from the area said 100 persons were left homeless, road and telephone lines across the island were cut, and banana plantations were heavily damaged by high winds and flood waters.

The weather station reports blamed the flooding both on high tides caused by the hurricane winds and torrential rains. The U.S. Weather Bureau said it had reports of rainfall up to 10 inches in some parts of the Eastern Caribbean.

Other reports said water was three feet deep in some parts of Fort de France on Martinique. The towns of St. Esprit, Riviere Pilote and Riveire Salee also were said to be flooded.

Beulah raked the eastern Caribbean with top winds of 85 miles per hour last night and forecasters warned it could bring gale warnings to the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico by this morning.

Speeding up slightly after reaching hurricane strength in late afternoon, Beulah was expected to intensify steadily during the night.

At 9 p.m. EDT the hurricane was centered near latitude 15.1 north, longitude 63.7 west, or about 300 miles southeast of San Juan, P.R., and 1,320 miles southeast of Miami.

'Closed For The Season'

So reads the sign posted at the entrance to the Kinzua Point picnicking and swimming area.

Closed for what season? A season consisting of only three months between Memorial Day and Labor Day, established by lesser recreational communities with nothing more to offer than activities that can be enjoyed in the warmer months, or the six-month season during which the Warren area has much to offer our city-weary neighbors?

That the shorter season is being adhered to by our recreational directors is evident. Apparently they are willing to close the door on the two most glorious months of the year, September and October, when, if anything, our tourist promotion activities should be stepped up. For Warren County has much to offer at this time of the year that can only be experienced by the outdoorist in our own forested hills and unspoiled valleys.

The small game season, already open, should be attracting hunters from a wide area for hunting in the county is as good or better than can be found elsewhere. Duck and goose hunting on the Kinzua Dam will soon be offering the shooter unlimited targets. And archery season for big game is not too far off in the future.

This is the time of the year, too, when fishing in the Allegheny River reaches a fabulous peak with bass, walleyes, northerns and muskies showing the added zip that comes with frosty weather.

Trout fishing through October 31 could and should be another added attraction to draw rodbenders from a wide area as there are no finer trout streams anywhere than in Warren County.

But even if the drawing power of hunting and fishing are discounted there are still many facets of outdoorism that should appeal to a wide variety of city weekenders to benefit the county economy.

There is no finer time of the year for camping, as the number of campers and trailers still on the road demonstrate.

Hiking through the woods, either now while the leaves are still green, or later when they are turning color, is highly invigorating now that the heat of summer has passed. And even when the leaves are down there is hardly anything more enjoyable than wading knee-deep through their rustling fluffiness.

And what housebound family can't enjoy a picnic at this time of the year?

Warren County is losing a great opportunity by accepting the three-month tourist season. With the recreational assets we have there is no reason that the months of May and September and October can't be just as important in attracting tourists as any other months of the year.

MAX LERNER

Orwell at Chicago

The National Conference for the New Politics in Chicago turned out to be a study in black and white: of a coup by the black power group and of a surrender to white self-hatred and masochism. The conference group which was originally formed to push peace and to get more effective political action for civil rights finds itself taken over by men dedicated to an internal war, who have contempt for the whole civil rights movement and who march only under banners of racist revolution.

The original founders cherished the courage of individual conviction in the face of conformity. But the decision of a majority of the conference to accept the 13-point black power policy statement "without changing a comma" intolerance, racist bigotry, anti-Semitism and all was as bleak a surrender to opportunism and as craven a yielding to the psychic intensities of a minority as anything in recent history.

Consider the planks of the black caucus that the convention accepted: a separate but equal racial division on all committees, 50 per cent black, 50 per cent white; black control of "black communities," presumably of schools, government programs and others; support on a black-check basis, for wars of "national liberation" everywhere, which in practice includes the Castro-dominated guerrilla wars in Latin America and the Chinese-dominated ones in Asia; an attack on Israel for its "imperialistic Zionist war" (the additional phrase, "this is not to imply anti-Semitism," is one of the more humorous products of the caucus); "self-determination for black people," which has no meaning unless it means a separate black republic or a set of black autonomous areas in the Deep South and in the big Northern cities.

There is nothing to prevent a group of young Negroes, angry at wrongs real and fancied and excited by the smell of power, from announcing this kind of manifesto. How many other Negroes will follow them on such a fantasy flight is highly questionable. Probably only a small minority. But when the whites are told (as James Forman of SNCC told the Chicago convention) that the blackpower group will formulate its own revolutionary battle plan and that "anyone who does not like it can go to hell," it is hard to see why the whites who are thus read out of the congregation should adopt the battle plan as their own, word for word and comma for comma.

Or perhaps not so hard: the self-hatred of white liberals and radicals, the product of a deep sense of guilt, is one of the big facts about them, and the black power group can't be blamed for exploiting it.

This strikes me as the end of the radical left in any meaningful sense in America, at least in this decade. The radical tradition has deep roots in American intellectual history, from Sam Adams and Tom Paine through Henry Thoreau and Thorstein Veblen and Eugene Debs to recent writers like C. Wright Mills and Erich Fromm. Whatever their faults they thought in humanist terms. But there is nothing radical or humanist in the black power manifesto forced on the Chicago convention.

ART BUCHWALD

Uncle John's Cabin

CHICAGO — The New Left just held a meeting in Chicago and set back radicalism by 20 years. The original idea of the meeting was for it to help unite all the left-wing organizations under one banner and start a third party to defeat President Johnson in 1968.

But before anyone realized what was happening, a minority of militant black power delegates took over the conference, and the majority of white delegates found themselves giving in to every demand made of them by the likes of Rap Brown, Floyd McKissack and James Foreman.

The black power people told the white delegates either to see every issue the Negro's way, "for they could go to hell," instead of fighting back, the white leftists caved in and adopted every black power proposal from the boycotting of General Motors to condemning Israel for fighting a war against the Arabs in the Middle East.

This seems to be a reverse form of "Uncle Tomism" and many of the white radicals are now being called "Uncle John's," because of their kow-towing to the militant Negro leaders.

It's a pitiful sight to see. "Giondie," the black man says, "do you know who the worst enemies of the black people are?"

"We are, boss, the white liberals."

"And do you know why?"

"Oh, I wish I did. I wish I did."

"Because you're always trying to understand us. Can't you get it through your dumb head that we don't want to be understood?"

"You've got to give us time. That's all we ask for."

"It's too late, boy. The only thing we can do with you now is to burn down your house."

"I was going to suggest that myself. But I want to do more for you than that. Could I take you to lunch?"

"I can't afford to be seen having lunch with you, boy. I've got my reputation to think of."

"Of course you do. I'm sorry for getting out of line. I should know my place by now. What can I do to show my devotion?"

"Well, we really don't give a damn one way or the other, but if you want to get involved you can support our program."

"Of course I will. What is it?"

"Impeachment of the President, free guns in the ghettos, the abolition of the Supreme Court and the overthrow of the U. S. government."

"There's nothing in there I couldn't support."

"But let's get something straight, boy. This is our show. We don't want you stealing it away from us."

"I wouldn't do that, sir. Say, if you won't have lunch with me, would you consider breakfast?"

"It's too risky, boy. I like you personally, but if I'm seen with you, I'd never be able to explain it to my people. You understand, don't you?"

"I do, I do."

"As a matter of fact, I shouldn't even be talking to you."

"Please don't reject me. The only thing I can't take is rejection."

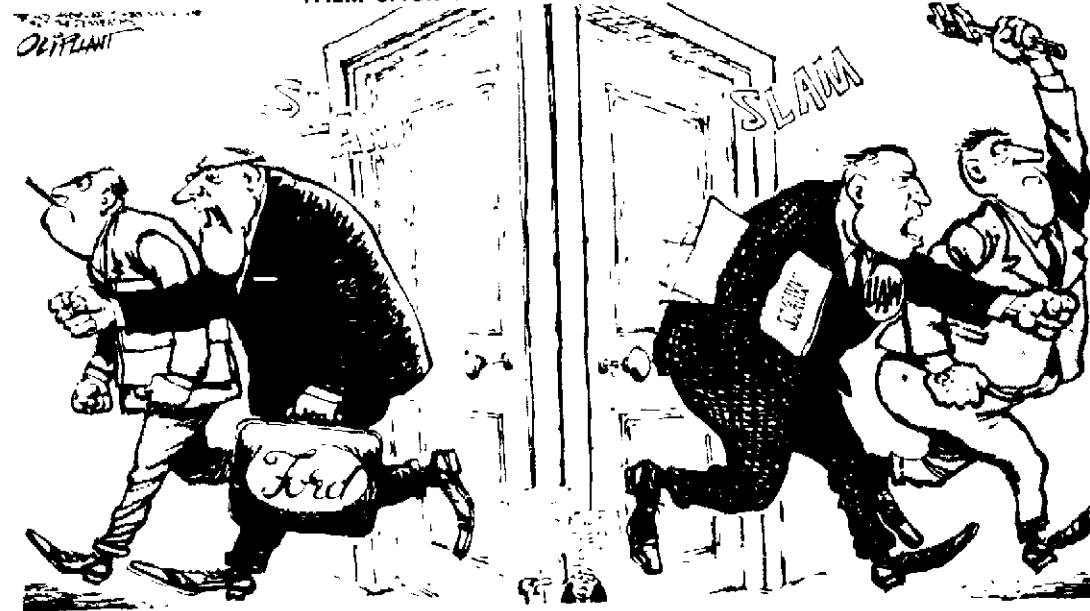

"Get off your knees, boy. You're embarrassing me."

"I've still got this other shoe to do."

"Well, hurry up and finish the shoe. I've got to go back into the meeting."

Maybe we ought to complain to Lady Bird.

FORCE! THAT'S ALL THESE PEOPLE UNDERSTAND! A STRONG STAND NOW WILL FORCE THEM BACK TO THE BARGAINING TABLE!

DREW PEARSON

Bunker and Vietnam Elections

WASHINGTON—Ellsworth Bunker, a big businessman turned diplomat, has unraveled some tough diplomatic assignments—the Dominican Republic, India and Argentina in the days of Dictator Peron. But he's just put across one of his biggest—the Vietnamese elections. It was Bunker who got the military off its high horse and gave the civilian candidates a break. . . . Considering the fact that Vietnam had never in all history held elections, Bunker helped put across a political miracle. . . . It was Dean Acheson, when Undersecretary of State, who discovered Bunker, gave him his first assignment. . . . LBJ has picked one of the most experienced Negro executives, Walter Washington, for the tough job of being the first Mayor of Washington, D.C.

Washington is an intimate friend of John Duncan, first Negro Commissioner of D.C., who has wanted to retire after nearly eight years of tough, sometimes thankless service. . . . From Hawaii to California to Kansas, officials who want honest elections are considering various types of voting machines. One they should be aware of is a punchboard-type machine, made by an A-1 company, but with several traps which could lead to dishonest voting. Voters can punch the wrong holes, or if they touch the paper with sweaty hands they can throw the complicated machinery out of whack. Punch card results, when taken out of the machine at the end of the day's voting, could be gimmicked with additional punches.

The day after George Lincoln Rockwell, the Nazi Fuehrer, was gunned down by a sniper, his storm troopers distributed literature opposing gun control legislation. . . . The anti-gun control lobby claims that snipers during the Newark riots had no trouble getting guns despite New Jersey's stiff gun control laws. However, a secret treasury department spot check made after the Newark riots showed that 56 gun dealers in four states bordering or near New Jersey sold 690 firearms to New Jersey residents. Thus, lax laws in states around New Jersey contributed to the Newark riots.

The British, worried about race riots spreading to the United Kingdom, are considering paying the return fares of Negroes who want to go back to the West Indies. . . . Stokely Carmichael, born in the West Indies, is considered unlikely to risk a return to the U.S.A. He's hopped from Cuba to North Vietnam, will probably remain an exile the rest of his life. . . . Book of the summer is Father James Cavanaugh's "A Modern Priest Looks at His Outdated Church." It's most reading. Father Cavanaugh, recently a graduate student at Catholic University in Washington, was the real author of the Saturday Evening Post's "Speaking Out" article entitled "I am a priest. I want to marry." . . . Father Cavanaugh was among the liberal priests who laid the groundwork for the recent teacher-student strike at Catholic U which forced the hierarchy to reverse itself on dropping Professor Charles Curran.

JOSEPH ALSOP

Schism in the Soul

JERUSALEM — Watching a magnificent brave people rejoicing in a magnificent and deserved victory is quite wonderfully exhilarating. Savoring the exhilaration, joining in the rejoicing, is about all one can manage in the first day or so in Israel at the moment.

But suddenly, half accidentally, the sobering second thought that victory also has its problems rudely but unavoidably intrudes on the exhilaration. In this reporter's case, the sobering second thought half-spoiled what should have been an almost perfect evening—a dinner with Teddy Kollek, this city's remarkably intelligent and genial mayor, high above the old city on the terrace of a new, Arab-staffed and managed hotel.

Good talk, good friends, quite exceptionally good food (so rare in Israeli Jerusalem)—all these elements of extreme enjoyment were present. But in the lobby glacial stares greeted us. On the roof one felt that our far from noisy or insistent presence ruined the dinners of the middle-class Arabs at the other tables. There was never for a moment anything at all overt; yet the basic problem of the occupied and occupiers was starkly posed.

Alsop

If you talk with Israel's present leaders, moreover, you soon discover that this is the main, the central, the all but insoluble problem resulting from Israel's great victory. It has nothing whatever to do, at least it has very, very little to do, with the brief strike in Jerusalem or the other greatly overpublicized signs of Arab restlessness and resistance. The plain truth of the matter is that the Israelis are entirely confident that suppressing any serious Arab resistance will be very easy indeed. They are swiftly too about it. For example, if there is a burst of sniper fire, the house it comes from is promptly leveled to the ground, no further questions asked. And the mixture of this swift toughness with day-to-day decency and generosity gives every sign of justifying the Israelis' confidence in their power to keep order.

The problem of the occupiers and occupied is far deeper than the danger of Arab resistance. The best way to indicate its profound difficulty and importance is to cite the statistical estimate officially prepared for the Israeli Cabinet by the government statistician, Prof. Roberto Bacchi.

Briefly, the Arab birth rate is rather more than 50 per 1,000 each year. And the Israeli birth rate is not quite half that. With well over a million Arabs now living on what victory has made Israeli territory, the Arab minority is already about 40 per cent of the total population. Prof. Bacchi has further warned the Cabinet that in a little more than a decade the Arabs will constitute an actual majority of the population unless radical steps are taken to alter the present situation.

The Bacchi report and all that lies behind it have begun to produce what can be called a schism in the soul of this country. As yet, the split is only in the Cabinet, which is deeply and nearly evenly divided. But in the long run the same split must be expected to divide all Israel and probably divide Israel in a pretty bitter way.

What the small Arab minority of the old days, which also benefited greatly from Israel's economic progress, peaceful and democratic co-existence was perfectly possible. Arab members held, and still hold, about a tenth of the seats in the Knesset. And whatever their secret sympathies, the Israeli Arabs, as they call the prewar minority here, showed no overt disloyalty throughout the war crisis.

With a huge minority that is likely to become an actual Arab majority, however, the problem is altogether different. Unless Israel is willing to give up its special character as a truly Jewish state, democratic co-existence is no longer feasible. The grim relationship of occupied and occupiers must be maintained and continued. For very few Israelis are prepared to contemplate a Knesset with an Arab majority.

Nor is that the end of this sad story. The only way to change the demographic balance, short of genocide, is to encourage maximum Arab emigration from the Gaza Strip to the former Jordanian territory on the West Bank and then to return to Jordan a very large part of that territory. But even if Jerusalem and certain strategically vital points like Latrun were to be omitted from such an arrangement it would still quite painfully impair Israel's present geographic security.

On one hand of this schism in the soul, therefore, there is the grim memory of enemy guns actually capable of shelling Israel's seacoast towns. Those who give priority to security swear (and one sympathizes) that "this must never, never happen again; we cannot be guilty of such injustice to our grandchildren."

Yet on the other hand of this schism in the soul there are considerations equally compelling. If one-half of the people of Israel are simply to hold down the other half by main force, this mere act of holding down will slowly transform those who do it. Israel will in truth become a garrison state. No wonder, then, that the schism is both deep and agonizing.

R. HARRIS

'Go Ahead Slugger'

HARRISBURG — Nothing excites House Speaker Kenneth Lee so much as the prospect of another parable, fable or bawdy joke from the freshman legislator from Fayette County.

Whatever the urgency of the moment, Lee watches eagerly for a light from Seat 177 in the distant recesses of the House. With the instincts of a Ziegfeld, the Speaker brings on Rep. Marion C. (Slugger) Klingensmith, R-Fayette, for some court jesting.

Last week, in the middle of an intent oration on the desirability of splitting some of the State's tax swag with private schools, Minority Appropriations Chairman Martin P. Mullen, D-Philadelphia, heard the gentle plink of the Speaker's gavel. The question was whether Mullen would yield to Klingensmith.

Well, naturally, "Go ahead, Slugger," said the Speaker. "Thanks, Slugger," retorted Klingensmith, the ex-pug from Brownsville (Pa., not Brooklyn), turned police chief, turned mayor, turned insurance agent. Klingensmith told the oldie about the three beggars, each with a vegetable. They decide to make soup; but each, in turn, feigned putting his potato, cabbage and carrot into the broth. Since none did, the stew turned out as boiled water.

The moral, of course, was that the Democrats ought to vote for some of the taxes if they want some of the largesse.

As with much legislative comedy, the humor is in the atmosphere, and in the character—Slugger Klingensmith is a cross between Yul Brynner and Mr. Clean—and the Republican side of the House roared.

While comedy in the House is largely unsophisticated, it does not lack for imagination—like the day the Democrats appeared on the House floor wearing black eye patches, ala Israeli general Moïse Dayan. The inference was that Minority Chief Herb Fineman was a great leader and Democrats would follow him through the tax battles. Rep. Paul M. Lawson, a Negro Democrat from Philadelphia, capped the gag by stalking onto the floor—after the first impact of the eye-patch play had subsided—wearing a white eye patch.

Two westmoreland Republicans—Funeral Director Eugene G. Saloom and Truck Driver William N. Tuscano—tangled vigorously during the debate over an additional judgeship for their home county. "I hate to argue against Mr. Tuscano," Rep. Saloom told the House, "because I'll have to ride with him tonight." Saloom then proceeded to rip apart Tuscano's position.

Up stepped a third Westmoreland legislator, Democrat C. L. Schmitt, the insurance broker. "For what purpose does the gentleman rise," asked Speaker Lee. "I just want to offer Mr. Saloom a ride home," said Schmitt.

Two Bucks County legislators got into it over their own judgeship, and Democrat James J. A. Gallagher questioned the authenticity of the population figures given by Republican John S. Renninger. There was a difference of 68,000 between the two, and Gallagher wanted to know, "Is that the U.S. Census figure, or yours?" Responded Renninger: "I'm sorry, I didn't make the count myself."

Republican Forest Hopkins, who publishes the North East Breeze, once asked that a bill be re-voted, and thus recorded on the official machine-punched ballot. Somehow the machinery had missed his name. "The paper runs a list of all the bills and how we voted on them. And this vote (on an appropriation bill with Erie County overtones) has to be on the record. . . . 'I own the paper,' explained Hopkins. "But the editor is a Democrat."

But Slugger Klingensmith, light on subject matter but voluminous in the philosophy department, is Speaker's Lee's uncontested No. 1 jester. "Taxes," said Slugger during the heat of the tax debate, "is like having babies. Easy to conceive but hard to deliver."

Catholic Prelate Urges War, Force

By PAUL RECER
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — War is an instrument of peace and necessary because "there are evil men in the world," Roman Catholic Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio, a close friend of the President, said yesterday.

The prelate, one of 22 election observers sent to South Vietnam by President Johnson, defended war as a moral tool in defense of liberty and justice. He supported his statements at a news conference with excerpts from wartime messages of Pope Pius XII and from the Vatican II Pastoral Constitution on the church in the modern world.

"It is necessary to use force and the man who doesn't believe in force will soon be a slave," said the archbishop. "You cannot have peace in the world without force because there are evil men in the world."

Although many Americans deplore the use of force and blood-letting, he said, "it's up to us to defend liberty and justice" in the world and this requires force.

Archbishop Lucey defended bombing of military targets in North Vietnam, but said he doesn't support the concept of subduing North Vietnam by bombing civilians.

"If we bomb civilians just to win the war," he said, "we would be reverting to savagery."

But, he said, "if we ever stop bombing (military targets) in North Vietnam they'll sweep down and we'll have a real war."

Archbishop Lucey said "doves" advocating peace at any price or an end to the bombing "are prolonging this war."

The archbishop was aboard the presidential jet Wednesday when Johnson flew here for a few days at his nearby ranch. The President escorted Archbishop Lucey to the prelate's car and introduced him to newsmen as "my good friend."

Nobel Prize Group Seeks Viet Peace

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Nobel Prize delegation is going to Vietnam to sound out the prospects for peace and all those involved in the conflict have agreed to receive it, the Foreign Ministry announced yesterday.

A spokesman said the ministry had been advised that the governments of North and South Vietnam, the Viet Cong and U.S. officials have expressed willingness to meet the delegation.

"The delegation intends to find out the parties' conditions for negotiations and a peace settlement in Vietnam," the announcement said.

No date was set for departure, but the spokesman said the delegation would leave before the year is out.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said "of course we would welcome them."

Other U.S. officials took a wait-and-see attitude on whether the group would have any more success than numerous past private endeavors to persuade Hanoi to talk about a peace settlement.

The delegation will be headed by two Nobel Peace Prize winners, Philip Noel Baker of Britain, and the Rev. Dominique Georges Pire, a Roman Catholic priest from Belgium.

Father Pire, 57, won the peace prize in 1958 for helping refugees in Europe after World War II. He and Noel Baker were among eight Nobel Peace Prize winners who sent a message to world leaders in August of 1965 appealing for a cease-fire in Vietnam.

Noel Baker, 77, won his peace prize in 1959 as a statesman and author on world disarmament. He was one of 155 Labor party members of Parliament who in February of 1966 pledged support of Prime Minister Harold Wilson's policy of backing the United States in Vietnam.

GI's Mourn Priest's Battle Death

By BERNARD WEINRAUB
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
HILL 63, South Vietnam — The death of a Roman Catholic chaplain from New York has stirred grief and shock in the dust-filled tents and bunkers of this Marine outpost.

The chaplain, Navy Lt. Vincent R. Capodanno, of Staten Island, was killed Monday in a fight seven miles south of here.

Capodanno — tall, with gray hair and a thin, athletic face — visited Mike Company on a mission near the provincial capital of Tamky. At dusk, as the company stepped through rice paddies that were fringed by heavy jungle, a North Vietnamese battalion struck with mortars and automatic weapons fire.

"The company command post tried to move into a big hole or a crater," an observer recalled. "The whole company was being hit hard and there were wounded Marines all over that were screaming for help and crying."

"The chaplain just jumped out of the hole and began praying with the wounded and giving the last rites. A mortar round hit right nearby and blew off part of his right hand."

"He kept going, from wounded to wounded and dead to dead. Then there were enemy fire and he dropped. The last time he was seen alive he was saying a prayer over a dead man."

"Somehow he just seemed to act the way a man of God should act," said Ross Nutera, a 20-year-old corporal from Buffalo, N.Y. "I can't believe he's gone."

Arrest Driver, 18
Borough police Thursday night arrested an 18-year-old Warren youth for driving during a period of license suspension.

Officers Robert Kates and Dennis Schmaier said at 11:35 p.m. they observed Manley Charles Peterson of 112 Walnut st., operating a vehicle on Pennsylvania ave. W. where police stopped him.

Levinsons Open Furniture Annex

Levinson Brothers complete furniture department has been moved to the former Loblaw building, across the street on Second ave., at the rear of Kresge's.

Kintner Signs yesterday erected a new sign on the building reading: "LEVINSON BROTHERS FURNITURE ANNEX — Temporary Location While Remodeling."

The entire third floor at Levinson Brothers is being completely remodelled. In order to protect furniture and furnishings from dust, scratches or marring, all the furniture has been carefully taken to the new store. This includes lamps, draperies, rugs, carpeting, furniture and all other furnishings.

"Everything on Levinson Brothers' third floor has been transferred to the new annex," said Dick Scalise. He invites everyone to visit the new store. Parking is available right next to the new furniture annex, making it most convenient to inspect the displays of furniture.

UFO Spotted in Skies near Sharon

SHARON, Pa. (AP)—An unidentified flying object has been spotted hovering in the northern skies for two nights in a row, police reported yesterday.

Thursday night the UFO appeared a half hour after a power failure blacked out 6,000 homes, police Sgt. James Reher said.

"It is large and mostly white but the center has an orange cast," said Reher. "After a while it broke up and pieces that looked like molten metal fell down."

Reher said dozens of people called police and said they had seen the UFO. Reher said he saw it too.

"I guess you can say I'm one of those nuts too," he said. "I don't know what it is but I saw it."

It first appeared about 9 p.m. Wednesday night, Reher said. It came back about the same time Thursday.

"It hovers around, going a little to the right, a little to the left, then a little up and down and then it disappears," he said.

He said all the firemen on duty also saw the object. He said he couldn't believe there was any connection with the blackout.

Eleven Sentenced Before Judge Flick

Eleven men were sentenced yesterday morning before Judge Alexander C. Flick. Since District Attorney Samuel F. Bonavita did not require taking of testimony, cases were disposed of in record time. All defendants had previously entered pleas.

Richard Charles Dunn, 20, of RD 1, Pittsfield, charged with burglary, three counts of larceny and malicious mischief, was sentenced to not less than six months and no more than one year in jail.

Dunn, who was involved in a string of car thefts in the area and about $8,000 damage to a piece of heavy equipment, was advised by the jurist he could have been facing a possible 40 year sentence.

The Pittsfield man will be paroled at the end of six months provided his behavior is good. A former North Warren man, Roger Myatt, pleaded nolo contendere to a charge of malicious use of the telephone. The judge permitted testimony waived, suspended imposition of sentence and placed the defendant on probation for 18 months.

Myatt was ordered to pay costs and continue psychiatric counseling with reports to be forwarded to the court. He was represented by Attorney Robert Wolfe.

Owen Jaggi, RD 1, Corry, who had entered a nolo contendere plea August 17 on an unlawful entry charge, also had imposition of sentence suspended. Jaggi is to pay costs, one-third of damage caused and will be on probation for one year. He is married, has three children and no previous record. William Hill Jr., was counsel.

Berry Burcham Jr., charged with failure to stop at the scene of an accident had imposition of sentence suspended, placed on probation for six months and ordered to pay costs and make restitution. Burcham's employer, Kenneth Lawson, offered to assist during the defendant's probation period.

Samuel Earl Barr, 17 E. Fifth st., found guilty by a jury on a charge of driving during suspension (his third offense) was ordered to pay a $200 fine, costs and serve 20 days in jail. Judge Flick told Barr if he appeared one more time on the violation he would be sentenced to Allegheny Workhouse.

James David Stewart, Tideoute charged with driving under the influence was sentenced to serve three days in jail, $120 fine and costs.

William P. Stewart Jr., 8 Morrison st., Warren, up for two counts of burglary, was sentenced to serve not less than six months and no more than one year in jail, but will be paroled in 10 days.

John Perrin and John Harkins both of RD 1, Pittsfield, charged with being accessories before and after the fact of the Stuart burglary were each sentenced to 90 days in jail with parole at the end of ten.

John Mahalko, charged with robbery by assault and force, was sentenced to not less than six months and no more than one year in jail. Judge Flick told the defendant his offense was one that caused the greatest concern to anyone in correction and one not considered a very good risk for parole or probation.

the second year and $6,000 in the third.

Changes in the minimum following tenure also are proposed in the legislation: $7,800 after nine years; $8,700 after 10 years and $9,600 after 12 years.

The PSEA, which represents 80,000 teachers, has been campaigning for a $6,000 starting salary scale for more than a year.

A spokesman said that the pending legislation has been discussed with the Shafer Administration, but could not say whether any commitment of support was received.

However, he noted that the 1966 Republican gubernatorial platform contained this plank:

"We will periodically increase teachers' salaries establishing as our ultimate goal a uniform minimum pay scale beginning at $6,000 and rising commensurate with experience and graduate education."

Vandalism Charged

Two Smethport boys, one 12, the other 15, are awaiting juvenile court action on vandalism charges which included a more than $1,000 loss at the home of McKean County District Attorney William Potter in June.

Police Chief E. Abbey Southwick said the boys readily admitted the acts of vandalism at the Potter residence and other homes in Smethport. They were released in custody of their parents.

Helicopter rides, guided tours, old-time fiddlers contests, square dance contests and exhibitions, demonstrations of logging machinery, and the new Forest Industries Historical Museum will be among the many attractions of this event, honoring the name of Johnny Appleseed, who established his first nursery in Warren County.

Cattle Club Members To Compete

Warren 7th-Day Adventist Missions Offering Today

Ways to expand a $40,000,000 private "peace corps" which operates in 189 countries around the world will be discussed at Warren Seventh-day Adventist Church, today at 11 a. m.

The "peace corps," explains Pastor Richard Meier, is a foreign missions program of health, education, welfare, and uplift which has been in operation since 1874 when Seventh-day Adventists sent their first missionary abroad.

"During the more than 90 years of service given by Seventh-day Adventist missionaries abroad, multiplied millions of persons have been helped to better lives," said Pastor Meier.

Despite the contention of some who do not know the facts, the true Christian way brought by missionaries has given health instead of disease, enlightenment in place of superstition, joy in place of fear.

Pastor Meier said a special offering will be taken today during the 11 a. m. worship service in his church to help expand the foreign missions program of the Seventh-day Adventist denomination.

"Millions of people still await the help that Christian missionaries can bring to body, mind, and spirit," said Pastor Meier. "We want to be a part of the answer to the world's problems, not part of the problem itself. As Christians we can do no other."

The next regular meeting will be held Wednesday, October 4, in the form of a Halloween party. All members are asked to come to the meeting dressed in a Halloween costume. The quartet pictured above will be making an appearance here in concert Sunday at Bethel Evangelical United Brethren Church at 3:30 p.m. All members of the congregation and friends are invited; there is no admission charge. However, a free will offering will be accepted.

Besides making many personal appearances the quartet is heard regularly over a wide area on radio. The program is called 'Chapel Echoes', and served as the inspiration for naming the group. This program has been on the air since November of 1960.

All of the members of the quartet are active members of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Silver Creek, N.Y., teaching Sunday School, singing in the choir, serving on important boards and committees. They have all dedicated their lives to the service of The Lord.

Pianist for the group is Mrs. Vonnie Dongell, wife of Rev. Dongell. She also is active in church service, teaching Sunday School, playing piano and organ, and working with youth.

Two records have been produced by the Chapel Echoes Quartet. They are both 33 1/3, long-play, h.f. recordings, and are available from the quartet.

Eisenhower Class of 1957 Observes 10th Anniversary

Warren County Was Nucleus of Oil Business

BIG BLENDER

Trucks belonging to the Halliburton Co. are seen here set up for a "frac" job on the Curtis lease near Sugar Grove. The trucks in the picture are just two of the fleet needed for the well completion. The truck to the right hauls several tons of special sand used as a propping agent and the outfit to the left mixes the sand with the water and any other additives which might be used on a job.

ON LOCATION

Just one of the fleet of trucks which carry equipment needed to hydrofracture a well is visible in this picture. This is part of the Dowell outfit from Corry fracturing a well on the Dav oil lease near Youngsville.

By TOM CURTIN

Flowing upward from a rock formation through a well-bore drilled into the earth, oil from the first well burst out of the ground, soared into the derrick and spread in a thin spray. It baptized the birth of the world's greatest industry 108 years ago on August 23 in nearby Titusville.

The little community, which then consisted of a saw mill and some farms, quickly developed into the first of a number of oil boom towns and before long the infant industry began growing at an incredible rate as new wells were brought in on farms throughout the many hills and valleys of northwestern Pennsylvania. The discovery of oil brought a totally new perspective which shook the economic foundations of the country and introduced a product which has spawned countless new associated industries. Today the petroleum industry is the largest in the world, surpassing even the giant steel industry, it employs people of every race, religion and in every corner of the globe.

As the plant grew and extended beyond the borders of this continent the early fields which produced the first crops of oil became less and less important, until most of them were abandoned and the overnight cities which marked some of the most colorful sites in American history disappeared. Despite the forsaking of the mother field by her large family, the initial development of the fields barely touched the millions of barrels of Pennsylvania crude which still lies beneath the area.

Outside the spectacular Bradford field, after the turn of the century the picture for oil producers in this area was rather bleak. However, it is impossible to estimate the millions of barrels of oil pumped from the many old "stripper" wells in this area over those years. Many of the producers thought the last great production had been taken from these fields, but the nostalgia of many producers was outweighed by an optimistic belief the field could one day again produce great quantities of oil.

Warren County was the nucleus of the business from its beginning, even though that beginning came as a warning to oil men of the dangers of the business as the first well in the county (second for the industry) was the first "dry hole". Since that time, the seemingly prophetic fate of the Grandin well near Tidioute, has manifested into a national average of one out of every nine wells being a paying producer. Needless to repeat here the many stories of fortunes made and lost in the risky business.

The primary problem which was the cause for the rapid decline of early production is the nature of the rock formation in this section of the country, referred to by geologists as the Appalachian field long before the War on Poverty was even thought of. Two words basic in every oilman's vocabulary are porosity and permeability. Porosity is the amount of open spaces between sand grains which are able to contain oil, water and gas. Permeability is the network of passages which connect the tiny open spaces in the sand, or the ability of the liquid or gas to move through the sand without being blocked off. Although generally the porosity of the Appalachian field is considered good, the permeability leaves much to be desired. When the earliest wells were drilled the rock pressure built up by gas contained in the sand for millions of years was strong enough to force great quantities of oil to the well bore and rush to the surface. However, after a great number of wells had depleted this rock pressure it became more difficult to extract this oil from the formations.

The oil industry engendered many developments in science and engineering. Many of the developments were experimented with in Warren County fields, but for years brought meager results. A great deal of interest and hopes were spirited by early attempts at secondary recovery. This method first employed agents such as water, re-cycled natural gas, or air which were compressed and injected back into the oil bearing formation through injection wells and pushed the oil into a central well where it could be pumped out. Although great success with this method was experienced in the Bradford fields, most of the Warren County fields did not share this good fortune. Mainly the problem was again the old bugaboo with permeability. And so area producers continued pumping old wells, but drilling very few new ones.

The method of completing oil wells once they drilled into the oil producing sands had remained the same in Warren County

THE SEARCH GOES ON

Jim Keane, a driller for Cotton and Freeman of Bradford, lets out more line on the spudder he is operating on the Hogset lease of the Rouse farm. This well when completed will make a total of 33 wells on that lease. So far this year over 150 new wells have been drilled and completed in the Warren area oil fields.

PREPARES FOR FRAC

Bud Curtis and two of his employees prepare a well for a "frac" on the Curtis lease near Sugar Grove. A packer is used to set the pipe at the desired level in the sand formation where the fracture is to be made. The pipe must be able to withstand the tremendous pressures built up by the pumper units. This particular well is being fractured again in a different zone than it was two years ago.

since shortly after the discovery of oil when the Roberts brothers of Titusville, who worked with explosives during the Civil War, found that production could be increased by "shooting" a well with several quarts of nitro-glycerine. This shot would be touched off in the oil sand and would cause a large cavity to form there where more oil could gather to be pumped up the well bore. This method is even used today in some areas of the county where more modern methods will not work because of the nature of the sand. Up until 1961, it was the only method used by county producers when they completed their wells.

In 1953 the Pan American Oil Company began experimenting with a new method of well completion. Meeting with success in the laboratory they took it to the oil fields and soon had a process of well completion on their hands which would cause a revolution in oil fields throughout the world. The method is known as hydraulic fracturing, or "hydrofracturing". In basic terms it requires great amounts of water and sand which are pumped by large compressors into the oil formation until such an intense pressure is built up the formation cracks, or "fractures". The sand in the water acts as a propping agent keeping the fractures open when the water is withdrawn and the oil and gas begin to move through the new passages. In a sense, hydrofracturing artificially increases the permeability in the sand, making it easier for the oil and gas to move into the well bore.

The oil fields of Warren County were about to see some new excitement as were many other fields in the surrounding area including the original Titusville field. One of the first successful wells to be hydrofractured in the county was in the Spring of 1961 when Louis Geer of Warren fractured one on his lease along the Dorcon road near the Oakland Cemetery. Little by little others employed the new method. Most producers adopted a "wait and see" attitude as the new process was much more expensive and greatly more technical than "shooting" had ever been. Before long successful wells were being brought in all around the county and areas such as Youngsville and Sugar Grove, all but given up on by oil producers years ago, soon became two of the hottest fields in the country, because of the shallow depth and quick "pay-back" characteristic of many of the wells there. Land was leased up and wells were drilled at a fantastic rate when compared with previous years.

Two companies, Halliburton Well Cementing Service and Dowell Division of Dow Chemical Company perform fracturing services in Warren area fields. As time passed on the use of the new method in the area was improved upon in many ways and a more technical and scientific type of oilman began to appear on the scene.

Although precise facts and figures are difficult to secure from oilmen in this area some idea of the success brought about by hydrofracturing can be gleaned from the following statistics on wells drilled and completed by shooting or hydrofracturing compiled by the Bradford District Pennsylvania Oil Producers Association. The heading under which we find statistics for Warren County wells is the Kane-Clarendon field, but a check on reports reveals that over 75 per cent of the figures are from Warren County wells. The figures are supplied each month by well logging firms, fracturing and shooting companies. Ten years ago, 1957, there were 46 wells drilled and shot in this area. These figures compared to 641 wells drilled and shot in the the Bradford field the same year. In 1960, there were 14 wells drilled and shot in the area. In 1961 fracturing began with four wells fractured and 26 shot for a total of 30. That same year the price of oil dropped 15 cents a barrel. By 1962 the impact of fracturing is quite evident as the total jumped up to 74 completions in the area with 50 fractured and 24 shot. In 1963 the Warren area fields had 278 fractured wells completed and 19 shot. In 1964 the score rose to 328 fractured wells and 6 shot. For the first time since the earliest days of oil the Warren fields were beginning to compete with the Bradford field which had 367 well completions that year. However, the surpluses of oil produced from all this excitement caused the price of oil to take another 15 cent reduction. However, the excitement hung on and in 1965 producers in the Warren area fields outdistanced the Bradford field with well completions for this area at 357 and Bradford dropped to 206. In 1966 the Warren area fields seem to have hit their peak with a total of 368 wells compared to 342 for the Bradford field.

As time goes on and statistics continue to accumulate 1967 may well go down as the year the excitement began to taper off as the total through July of this year is 150 wells as compared to 190 during the same period of time last year. Completions in the Warren area fields during the month of July total 28 with 27 fractured and one shot.

A good explanation of the apparent decrease in activity in area fields is given in the July 31 issue of the "Oil and Gas Journal", the trade magazine for the petroleum industry. An article entitled "Crude Glut Hits Penn Grade Refiners" explains that large amounts of oil being produced from hydrofractured wells in the Penn Grade area, which includes parts of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, and West Virginia, have flooded the extremely limited market and are likely to cause a cutback in the price of crude. The article which contains an illustrated map showing Roane County, West Virginia, Stark County, Ohio and Warren County, Penna. as the places "where Penn Grade flow is spiraling", states that output from these fields totaled 34,833 barrels of oil per day in 1966 as compared with 31,593 barrels per day in 1961. And for the first half of 1967 production has been estimated at 36,750 barrels per day.

A common thought is that the more oil produced, the better off everyone should be. This line of thinking is not exactly correct. The main problem is that all of this oil must be handled by only 10 small refineries. Years ago when Pennsylvania production began to dwindle, many area refineries either went out of business, or changed over to western grade crude—as did Warren's own United Refinery. Thus, when production once again soared to "boom" proportions the existing market for the product was not able to handle all of it until now the refineries and pipelines have absorbed nearly all of the surplus oil they can handle.

With no evidence of any great cutback in production this spring both Pennzoil and Quaker State, the largest buyers of Warren area crude oil, began restricting the amount of oil they would take from producers in an attempt to keep from cutting the prices paid for the oil. However, even now the production remains high and many more new wells are being brought in each month making the situation worse. The slackening in drilling activity evidenced this year indicates that many producers are mindful of the situation, but it may be too late.

The producer is put in the very frustrating position of having the means to greatly increase his, until recently very meager production, but if he does he may not be able to get his money back for a long time with proration and a possible cut in oil prices. The high costs of hydrofracturing and other well treatments have been quite shocking for the producer, but have been somewhat justified if they have been successful. Faced with the increased costs of well servicing, supplies, the land pinch caused by mushrooming population, zoning laws and safety restrictions which cost him money and the loss of much area that cannot be produced and the high cost of labor, it is hard to believe today's oil producer is getting nearly one fifth less per barrel of oil than he did 20 years ago and nearly 100 per cent less than when oil was first discovered in these regions. Thus it is no wonder that he tries to grab a few good moments from a necessary business that is at its best risky and rough.

As one drives among the farm country in the northern and western parts of the county it is not a rare sight to see the silhouette of a pumping jack gracefully bobbing up and down against the setting sun. The electric jack is a far cry from the steam engines that once operated the walking beams on large wooden derricks on hundreds of wells throughout the area. And the technology that is bringing that oil to the surface has evolved tremendously since those early days as experimental projects daily are initiated on area leases. But the spirit of the oilman who found that oil, and oil he found has not changed. Despite its ups and downs, the oil business has been a large factor in Warren County economics for more than a century and will more than likely continue for another 100 years.

Independent Oil Men Organizing

By TOM CURTIN

The Pennsylvania oil producer has always been an independent sort who liked to run his own business and fight his own battles and has usually been able to ride with the ups and downs of the business.

However, with an increasingly complex world to live in and the development of a strong technology within the business as well as the growing powers held by the large oil companies, the independent oilman is beginning to look around for others of his decreasing species. Thus, throughout the country over the past 40 years have sprung up a number of independent oil producers' associations. Two such organizations represent oil men in this region. They are the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association and the Bradford District Oil Producers Association. Since the Penn Grade Crude Oil Association tends more to the interests of the large oil producing and refining companies, the organization looked to by most independents is the Bradford District Oil Producers Association.

Founded originally in 1924 as the Northwestern Pennsylvania Oil Producers' Association the group reorganized under its present title on February 18, 1931, and maintains its offices in the South Penn building on Boyleston avenue in Bradford. Although primarily the rank and file was formed by producers from the immediate Bradford vicinity in recent years as that field has become more depleted and the impetus has moved more toward the Warren County area fields producers from around here have begun to join the organization.

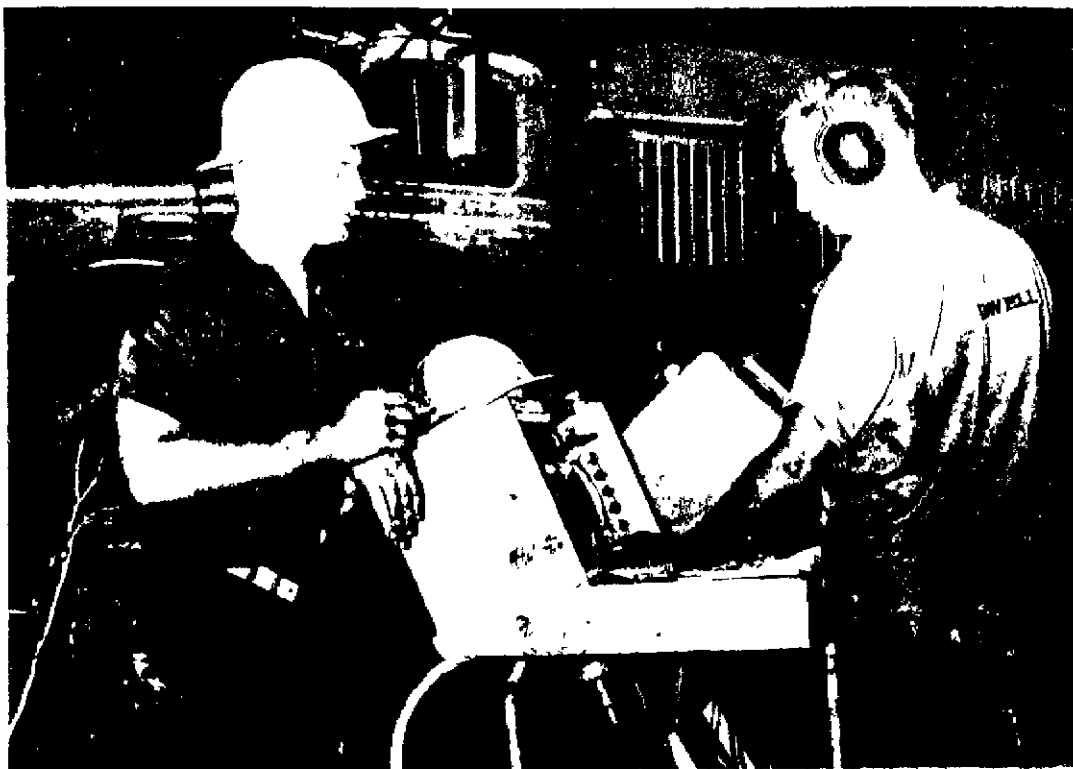

President of the organization is E. James Bryner, of Bryner and Son Oil Co., Custer City. Perhaps it is somewhat a sign of the times indicating the fading production in the Bradford field when you find the same man has also diversified and made provision for the future by founding and operating Sigma Engineering, a company which designs and manufactures equipment for making electronic resistors used in radio and television sets.

Nonetheless, Bryner is an oilman first and gives evidence as he points with pride to a painting on the wall depicting Custer City in the boom days as a small community located in a valley with the surrounding hills sprouting wooden derricks from old standard rigs as boxed-in steam lines wind over the landscape from well to well. The oilman recalls some of the color of the old boomtown and describes the notorious bull and bear fights held in a pit dug in a nearby field. The unusual fights between the two beasts drew observers and odds makers from all over the country and were ultimately ceased by the S.P.C.A. The little community at that time hosted a total of nine hotels and saloons. Much of this is reminiscent of Warren County's own short but colorful Cherry Grove excitement. It was to this field that Bryner's grandfather came and be in the oil business operated today by his grandson.

It is from this vignette of oil history we begin discussing some of the activities currently undertaken by the Bradford District Producers' Association and it is not coincidental that one of those projects has evolved from the nostalgia for those colorful days of early oil. Presently the organization along with the Bradford Chamber of Commerce is attempting to erect a wooden standard rig, built in exact proportions as the ones used in the early oil fields, and establish a commemorative memorial to the industry which built that community and launched many great men upon their careers. Plans are to operate the rig with an authentic steam drilling engine.

The president goes on to explain the organization was founded and still operates as a common interest group for small independent producers. The objectives being research in getting out more oil, seeking higher prices for Pennsylvania Crude, discussing problems of producers, keeping an eye on related legislation, providing insurance and hospitalization benefits at group rates to members and other matters incidental to the trade such as providing professional aid to communities seeking fair zoning and safety restrictions for drilling operations. The organization also carries the backing of many larger oil companies and firms associated with the business such as banks and oil well servicing and technical operators.

Recently the group was asked by the state to help in drawing up a pollution law and more restrictions on the plugging of old wells.

DOING IT THE DOWELL WAY

Two members of a fracturing crew of the Dowell Company, which is a division of the Dow Chemical Company, stand by the instrument counsels which keep them informed of what is happening when a "frac" is being conducted. Note the earphones which must be used for communication among crew members while a job is being done. This is necessary because of the noise from the powerful engines which operated the pumps.

LOOKS AHEAD

E. James Bryner, president of the Bradford District Pennsylvania Oil Producers Association, points out some of the operations on the Bryner and Son oil properties at Custer City. Although an oil man at heart, Bryner sees the Bradford field as being "over the hill" and has provided for the future by building up Sigma Engineering, an electronics company which designs and builds machines for manufacturing resistors.

Snokey Says:

More chance for man-caused fires. Be careful!

WATCHING FLOWBACK

After a "frac" is completed the intense pressure built up by the compressed water and the natural gas in the oil formation cause the free water to flow back to the top of the well and in most good wells eventually the flow will change from water to oil. Based on oil assessment tax figures oil production last year in the county can be estimated at over 1,100 barrels of oil per day. However, this estimate is believed to be quite low and actual production could easily be twice that amount.

They sent a qualified expert to present their views before the state Sanitary Water Board. Currently a bill concerning this problem is in the Legislature. Bryner says, "Our association wants to represent oil producers so they can meet these restrictions economically."

In the area of research the association combined forces with the Penn Grade Crude Oil Association and the South Penn Oil Company to test a secondary recovery method utilizing the injection of alcohol into the oil sands. The test conducted two years ago worked extremely well in the laboratory at Penn State, but when experimented with on a South Penn oil lease near Custer City the results left something to be desired. The tests are still being evaluated and information is passed on to the members.

Another useful service extended by the producers' group is the Practical Operators' Committee which holds meetings nine times a year for all members. Here are discussed many of the problems encountered by producers and information is swapped. New innovations in the industry are passed on to the producers and often the group is addressed by a panel or individual well versed in the topic at hand.

At the downtown office on the second floor of the South Penn Building we find the association's secretary, Mrs. Betty Dougherty, hard at work compiling the many statistics the organization collects each month. Some of the statistics compiled are the number of well completions in the Penn Grade field and this is broken down into wells shot and wells hydrofractured; production figures for the Penn Grade field; and runs to stills or refining records. Mrs. Dougherty explains the Penn Grade field takes in parts of Pennsylvania, New York, West Virginia and Ohio.

The Bradford District Producers Association has a membership of about 100 members who come from area communities including: Bradford, Clean, Clarendon, Warren, Titusville, Smethport, Kane, Port Allegany, and Corry. Up until recently the association published "Producers Monthly," a technical trade journal carrying information pertinent to area fields. The monthly magazine is now handled by the Bradford Printing Company.

It is anticipated this region will continue producing oil for years to come, but as the oil becomes more difficult to obtain the costs of production will run extremely high increasing the load carried by independent producers. However, through organizations such as the Bradford District Producers some of this burden may be lightened and assurance can be given this rare breed will not become extinct.

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars. FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1967

ARIES (March 21 to April 20)—Those of you who begin the day early and in an orderly fashion will place an extra feather in your cap. The late starter may have heavier treading. Generally friendly influences.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21)—Good and efficient efforts will bring much in the way of accomplishment now. Shape your endeavor to meet just demands.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)—Day should be generally good but, without personal initiative, you could bog down. Keep facts separated from fancy and walk on solid foundation. Maintain a strong spirit.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23)—Your intuition may need sharpening up now. Remain true to your Sign's dignity, sensitivity (NOT overstressed) and understanding. Distinguish between wholesome fun and false pleasure.

LEO (July 24 to August 23)—Get the "disagreeable" tasks finished as early as possible, then do whatever you personally wish. But in all, gravitate to the intelligently sensible. Don't go to extremes.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23)—New offerings may attract you, but do not give up old projects of value. In those fields in which you are trained and have a liking for, you may well speed ahead now. Avoid foolish chance-taking.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23)—You may feel disturbed by some situation, but do not become discouraged. Examine, contemplate, but press on, in your best manner—and with confidence. A few choice plums for so doing.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22)—Excellent prospects for general interests, and your special desires—if they are within the realm of practicability. But do not give up those idealistic plans you believe have merit.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21)—Be cautious in expansion, promotional efforts; mostly do not force an opinion that may boomerang. The patient, work-it-out-with-all-concerned plan will bring better returns—sooner.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20)—There's opportunity now to gain new laurels through actually WAITING—patiently, but not obviously, of course. Like the cat that sits silently by its food dish; Who can refuse?

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19)—Honor and esteem may be attained through continued effort and good humor—but without over-taxing yourself. Especially favored: Aeronautics, research, conservative investments.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20)—Neptune, in friendly aspect, stimulates amicability, cooperation, responsibility and progress by the process of study, conscientiousness and good reasoning.

YOU BORN TODAY have a way with the opposite sex, AND with your own; of getting over your point, putting your position into favor. You will meet, make friends with many people through life who will appreciate your sensitive, competent self and who will aid you to advance more quickly than ordinarily. You dislike untidiness, uncleanness, and lack of will to improve; may be hard on loved ones at times because you see a mistake coming, a fault growing. Curb this tendency toward censoriousness. You are especially capable of carrying a position of responsibility, artistry, handling assets others might squander. Birthdate of: Luigi Galvani, Italian physicist; Leo Tolstoy, Russian writer.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

(c) 1967 By The Chicago Tribune

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

+ NERVOUS INDIGESTION

Nervous indigestion is a common complaint because the gastrointestinal tract is the sounding board for disturbances arising from anxiety and emotional upsets. The digestive organs can be normal but are misbehaving. But just because the nerves are to blame for dyspepsia does not mean that distress is imaginary.

The digestive tract is controlled by the autonomic nervous system. Its impulses are responsible for churning of the stomach and contractions that propel food along the alimentary tract. These nerves also are capable of turning the secretions off and on, and in this respect, can alter the quantity and quality of the enzymes produced for the digestive processes.

When an individual has a nervous predisposition the stimuli created by emotional upsets are stronger than usual. The muscles of the stomach and the intestine go into painful spasm and the gastric ferments pour out in the wrong proportions leading to gas, dyspepsia, and other digestive symptoms. Vomiting ensues when nerve stimulation causes the gastric pouch to go into reverse.

The condition is difficult to treat. It is impossible to renovate the nervous system and equally difficult to change the person's way of living. Some sufferers improve with reassurance but the majority must alter their habits. Heartburn, unpleasant breath, bloating, gas, and a bad taste in the mouth will be decreased if the person refrains from belching.

Moderation in the use of alcohol, tobacco, laxatives, and certain medicines are helpful also. Strive for a better balance between work, rest, and recreation. Drugs that relax the individual and his intestinal tract are indispensable until improper eating and emotional habits are corrected. Sedatives quiet the body as a whole; the antispasmodic and anticholinergic drugs have a more specific effect upon the overactive nervous system.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

+ ORANGE PULP

Mrs. C. M. writes: I eat an orange a day, pulp and all. But my husband tells me the pulp should be discarded. Will eating it affect my health?

REPLY

No. Include the skin too, if you like it. In fact, chocolate-covered orange peel is a tasty candy.

+ OVERGROWN SCARS

B.P. writes: What makes keloids grow on a tattoo?

REPLY

Persons who are predisposed to keloids develop ugly scars whenever the skin is traumatized. This includes tattooing. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on keloids.

+ CHEST RALES

J.T.S. writes: What is meant by rales in the chest?

REPLY

Rales are sounds the physician hears when there is congestion in the lungs. The noise stems from moisture in the bronchi and air sacs that move with each breath.

WEEK'S PREVIEWS

The new season is in full swing now, with the coming week rounding out the debuts of remaining new entries. You probably have sampled some of them but withhold your conclusions until you have seen at least three episodes. A series can get better... or worse... you know.

In these days of many program changes it's difficult sometimes to sort out the continuing shows from the special one-shots. But NBC has a spectacular special tonight with its "Miss America Pageant," and a documentary special Friday night on Negro rioting in American cities this summer.

ABC offers an unusual four-hour special Sunday evening in an in-depth study of Africa and its people. The program is broken into four hour-length segments which will be televised individually on successive Tuesday mornings beginning Sept. 19 for the primary benefit of classroom viewing.

The first hour is titled "Africa Adventure Begins" and deals with Africa's animals, history, and dawn of civilization. The second hour is concerned with tribalism, health hazards, education, and current trends in politics. The third segment looks at sports, arts, the mark of slavery, and new nations, while the final portion is devoted to overseas provinces, the controversy of colonialism, apartheid, a summing up, and Smokey Says:

—Another case of Human Carelessness!

speculation on what's ahead for Africa.

ANOTHER TRY

The backers of the United Network have great faith in the axiom about trying again. They have hopes of resurrecting the network and having it back on the air before the end of the year.

This is the network which broadcast the Las Vegas Show with host Bill Dana and which only lasted one month. The network corporation is currently under restrictions of the Bankruptcy Act but has petitioned the court for permission to reorganize.

For its initial venture, entertainment will be bypassed in favor of news and public affairs. Agreements are being made with several newsgathering agencies for material to fill a one-hour daily feed, between 2 a. m. and noon when AT & T rates are lowest.

The tentative program would include U. S. news, world news, happenings in Washington, United Nations news, foreign news, films, and a program covering people, trends, and historic developments.

This venture proving successful, the next step would focus on sports and the third phase would emphasize entertainment.

PEOPLE & PROGRAMS

BING CROSBY national program golf tournament will be televised by ABC-TV on January 13-14 and NBC will bring the Hawaiian Open on Nov. 4-5.

CUSTER, ABC's new series on one of the most colorful and controversial figures in American history, will be carried Sunday afternoons on Ch. 7 on a delayed basis.

BENJAMIN BRITTEN and His Aldeburgh Festival will be the theme of the Bell Telephone Hour on Friday, Nov. 3. Britten is acclaimed as one of the world's foremost living composers and Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will be seen on the program.

G.E. COLLEGE BOWL has had its season premiere date changed. This popular program will return on NBC-TV Saturday, Sept. 23 at 5:30 p. m.

BOB HOPE's Christmas Special has been honored with the 1967 Golden Mike Award as top winner in the best special production. The award is presented by the American Legion Women's Auxiliary. The Junior Jury Award went to "The Monkees" as "favorite program" in a poll of the auxiliary's 80,000 junior members.

SO THEY SAY

Planning and research experts believe that the growing trend to home air conditioning will have a drastic effect on summer television programming. It is believed that summer viewing remains high where the home has air conditioning and thus plans must be made to capture and enlarge the summer TV audience, which simply means... summer reruns may have to go!

Shirley Temple Black's announcement as a candidate for a vacant seat in California's House of Representatives has its effect on TV, too. One of her opponents has issued a notice to television stations in that particular district that they will have to provide equal time if the stations show old Shirley Temple movies. A California political candidate now has to decide whether to be satisfied with residual payments on old movies or try for the jackpot.

WILLIAMSON

Mike Douglas tops NBC's famous Johnny Carson as a result of your vote on two late-night and two nationally syndicated variety shows:

Mike Douglas, local stations, 73.5%, very good.
Johnny Carson, NBC, 68.0%, good.

Merv Griffin, local stations, 62.5%, good.
Joey Bishop, ABC, 51.2%, average.

As previously announced, we are omitting the ballot box today. It will appear again next weekend. Meanwhile, we trust you are critically watching all new programs and those continued from last season so that when you again vote in this nationwide newspaper TV survey, there will be little doubt of your opinions. Take an active interest this season in TOP VIEW. As we proceed, our survey will reveal what readers think of all programs. Continue expressing your feelings to us in letters on any TV subject.

READERS SPEAK

Dear TOP VIEW: Johnny Carson talks vulgar about everything. His ridicule and snide remarks about the President of the U.S. are more harmful than the protestors that get out and march. Carson should be with them! It is perfectly right to disagree and express one's opinion, but it should be done in a gentlemanly way. How was Carson ever put back on that show? — Against Vulgarity, Waco, Tex.

Dear TV: Mike Douglas (the man) is excellent, but with all the bores in show business he is bound to have some on his program. But this Mike stands for character, decency. He can be that without being disagreeable about it. Very rare. — Sara Livingstone Palmer, Hartford, Conn.

Dear TV: We are sorry Red Skelton is back on TV. He gets snottier every program. Also Jackie Gleason might be okay for deaf people. — George Marshall, Corry, Pa.

Dear TV: With increasing harrages of commercials, sponsors and advertisers must take for granted that viewers are a blob of imbeciles facing their sets. They are killing the goose that lays the golden eggs by overstuffing her with too many interruptions. There is a growing "don't buy that product attitude" catching on. — William Heitzman, Colorado Springs, Colo.
